Dear Reader,
To be honest, the author's manuscript wasn't supposed to become a book. There was a horrible mix up. You can keep reading, if you want. Just don't take any of these suggestions seriously.
Sincerely,
a very sorry editor

Chapter 1 A PLEASANT MEAL GONE WRONG

Imagine a nice, calm evening at home. You're enjoying a lovely meal with the family. Maybe you're eating a delicious burger or a fresh salad. Sounds like a perfect night.

But what if there's a groan in the distance? The sound of something creeping toward you? The stink of rotting flesh in the air? Oh no! It's zombies. The dead have risen from their graves. And they're hungry for brains!

**Editor's Note: This was supposed to be a book about poodles. The author was supposed to write about fluffy poodles!*

Time to Survive!

The zombies are outside. They ate Mr. Sullivan next door. In no time, they'll smell you. Then they'll head your way!

Good thing you're prepared. You've got a survival guide you never thought you'd need. It's time to survive a zombie attack!*

The average American eats about 15.5 pounds (7 kilograms) of pasta each year.

Chapter 2 FEED THE FREAKS

Believe it or not, zombies don't eat just human flesh. Some like to eat a well-prepared meal instead.* They could have told us that if their faces weren't rotten.

Did you know that zombies love eating pasta? It's squishy like brains but much tastier. Head for the kitchen. Boil up a box of spaghetti. Maybe bake some cheesy garlic bread. Zombies usually don't bite the hands that feed them!

Survival List

Zombies' Favorite Non-Food Treats

- brains
- stomachs
- arms
- people named George

**Editor's Note: We couldn't fact-check what zombies like. The author totally made this up.*
